

Treescape News

July - August 2020

Hello everyone,

As you are aware, I have recently come back as Executive Chairman of Treescape®. It is great to see many familiar faces as well as meeting new team members of the Treescape® family, who are bringing valuable new ideas and experiences to the company and our customers.

While change may seem daunting for we also know it can present exciting new opportunities that may have been missed while operating in “business as usual” mode.

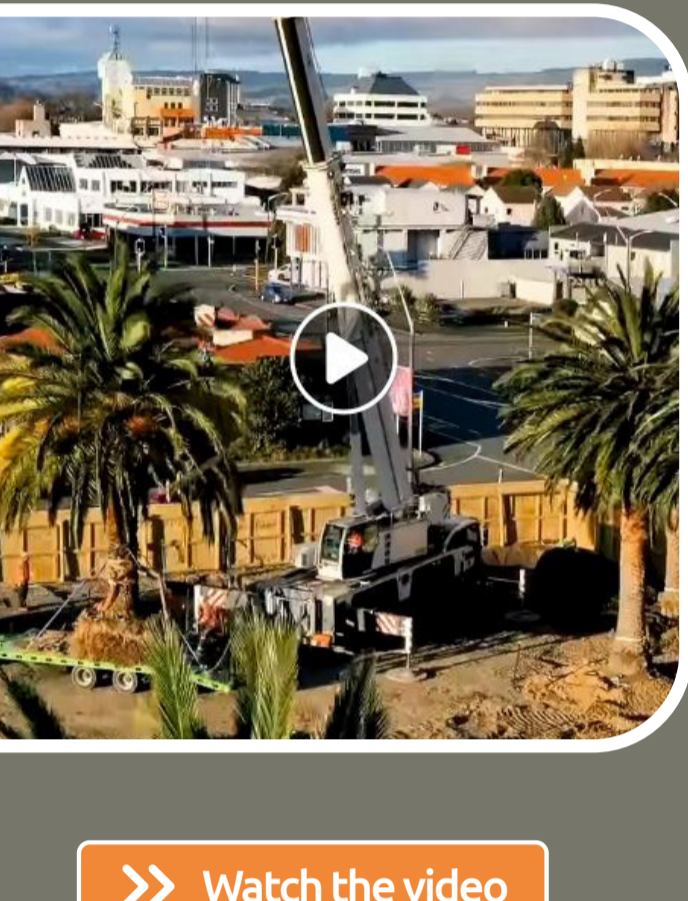

One thing is certain: the world we live in has dramatically changed with the Covid-19 pandemic and how we learn to adapt to the new normal will determine how well we succeed in the future. I know Treescape® is up for the challenge.

I look forward to catching up with you as I get around the company in coming months.

Kind regards

Ed Chignell
Executive Chairman

Tree Transplanting

Trees can be a truly unique feature of urban design, especially if they're large, have a commanding presence, and add history to an area. When you have beautiful mature trees, you don't want to lose them – like Palmerston North's iconic Phoenix Palms... An incredible new sports and entertainment hub – the Central Energy Trust Area – is being developed and they wanted to move their beautiful Phoenix Palms to line the entrance plaza which is the welcome point for visitors to the venue. We used our expertise (and a large crane!) to carry out the exercise. The trees' root structures have been supported to help them recover, and they're being fed with a boost of plant food.

Restoration Project

Our Masterton depot recently started the process of bringing Palmerston North's Te Motu o Poutoa clifftop look-out back to pre-European conditions. With the help of a helicopter, our arborist and the pilot safely removed around 30 mature exotic pine trees, avoiding significant damage to archaeological remains. Step two is replanting in native vegetation. Watch the video to see the helicopter in action!

Geo-Asset Mapping App

We have successfully built an app that allows our crews to quickly identify the level of risk a particular tree poses to a power line. We've recently completed a pilot project for PowerCo power line assets and the feedback was overwhelmingly positive.

Australia

More Phoenix Palms! This time we were tasked with pruning them. The challenge? The trees were in Cronulla's bustling Kingsway. See what was involved and how we did it.
